★ 4.9/5 Rating by Bar Candidates

"Answering bar questions every day gave me consistent practice and helped turn legal knowledge into actual bar-ready answers. It trained me to organize my thoughts with clarity and precision, even under time pressure. Over time, I noticed my issue- spotting and legal reasoning became much sharper. More importantly, the daily habit built real confidence in my answer-writing. By the time review season intensified, writing answers already felt second nature."

Atty. Sheridan Lance Carabio
University of the Philippines College of Law - 2024 Bar Passer

"Answering bar questions consistently became one of the biggest factors that helped me pass the Bar. Reading concepts is important, but actually answering questions trained me to think like the examiner, apply the law under pressure, and spot issues faster. It exposed the topics I thought I understood but actually needed more work on. Over time, it improved not just my legal knowledge, but also my confidence, discipline, and time management. By exam day, answering felt familiar instead of overwhelming. Practice didn't just prepare me, it made the difference between studying the law and knowing how to use it."

Atty. John Samarita

"Practicing bar questions daily helped me develop strong discipline in my review routine. It pushed me to think like an examiner and focus on what truly matters in every answer. With each question, I became more comfortable writing concise yet well-supported answers. The constant practice exposed gaps in my knowledge and allowed steady improvement every day. Looking back, this habit became one of my best investments for bar preparation."

Any competency score, performance result, recommendation, or Bar readiness indicator generated by the system is intended only to assist the user's preparation and should not be interpreted as an official examination result.

The predictive Bar readiness indicator is intended solely as a learning-support feature and does not guarantee passing or failing the Philippine Bar Examination.

4. Free Access to Bar Examination Questions and Public Materials

BarBuddy may provide certain Philippine Bar Examination questions, legal materials, and other publicly available information for users to browse and review without purchasing a subscription.

The availability of a question or legal material on BarBuddy does not necessarily mean that BarBuddy owns the underlying material.

Where a question, legal text, government publication, or other material is an official government work or otherwise not protected by copyright under applicable Philippine law, BarBuddy does not claim exclusive ownership of that underlying material.

Users may access publicly available questions through BarBuddy for personal educational and review purposes, subject to applicable laws and restrictions.

However, users must distinguish between public or official materials and BarBuddy's original or proprietary content.

5. Office of the Bar Confidant and Government Materials

BarBuddy may provide access to or reference Philippine Bar Examination questions and other materials that originate from publicly available official sources.

Nothing in BarBuddy grants the platform ownership over official government materials that are not legally subject to exclusive ownership.

However, BarBuddy is an independent educational platform and is not the Office of the Bar Confidant, the Supreme Court of the Philippines, or any other government agency.

BarBuddy does not claim to be officially affiliated with, endorsed by, sponsored by, or operated by the Office of the Bar Confidant or the Supreme Court of the Philippines unless expressly stated otherwise.

Define the archipelagic doctrine of national territory, state its rationale and explain how it is implemented through the straight baseline method (2016 BAR)

YOUR ANSWER 407 Words

ANSWER: The archipelagic doctrine treats an archipelago as a single unit, so that the waters around, between and connecting its islands, regardless of their breadth and dimensions, form part of the internal waters of the State. Its rationale is to preserve the territorial integrity, political unity, national security and economic interests of the archipelago. It is implemented by drawing straight baselines that join the outermost points of the outermost islands and drying reefs.

LEGAL BASIS: Article I of the 1987 Constitution provides that "the waters around, between, and connecting the islands of the archipelago, regardless of their breadth and dimensions, form part of the internal waters of the Philippines." Part IV of UNCLOS (Articles 46 to 54), particularly Article 47, allows an archipelagic State to draw straight archipelagic baselines, provided that (a) the ratio of water to land inside the baselines is between 1:1 and 9:1, (b) no baseline exceeds 100 nautical miles, except that up to 3% of the total may reach 125 nautical miles, and (c) the baselines do not depart to any appreciable extent from the general configuration of the archipelago. The Philippines implemented this through R.A. 3046, as amended by R.A. 5446, and later R.A. 9522 (2009), which the Supreme Court upheld in Magallona v. Ermita (G.R. No. 187167, 2011).

APPLICATION: Without the doctrine, each island would have its own separate territorial sea, and the waters between them could become high seas or exclusive economic zones open to foreign vessels, which would divide the country and expose it to security and economic risks. By drawing straight baselines connecting the outermost points of the outermost islands, all the waters inside are enclosed and treated as internal or archipelagic waters, and the territorial sea, contiguous zone, EEZ and continental shelf are then measured outward from those baselines. Under R.A. 9522, the Kalayaan Island Group and Scarborough Shoal are governed by the "regime of islands" under Article 121 of UNCLOS, so they generate their own maritime zones without being enclosed by the main baselines. As held in Magallona, these baselines do not reduce Philippine territory; foreign vessels only enjoy the rights of innocent passage and archipelagic sea lanes passage recognized by UNCLOS.

CONCLUSION: The archipelagic doctrine makes the Philippine islands and the waters connecting them one integrated territory. It is justified by national unity, security and economic necessity, and it is carried out through the straight baseline method under R.A. 9522 and Article 47 of UNCLOS.

Suggested (Model) Answer

A: By the term “archipelagic doctrine of national territory” is meant that the islands and waters of the Philippine Archipelago are unified in sovereignty, together with “all the territories over which the Philippines has sovereignty or jurisdiction.”

This archipelagic doctrine, so described under Art. 1 of the 1987 Constitution, draws its rationale from the status of the whole archipelago in sovereignty by which under Part IV of the UNCLOS the Philippines is defined as an Archipelagic State in Art. 46, thus:

a. “archipelagic state” means a State constituted wholly by one or more archipelagos and may include other islands;
b. “archipelago” means a group of islands including parts of islands interconnecting waters and other natural features which are so closely interrelated that such islands waters and other natural features form an intrinsic geographic, economic and political entity, or which historically have been regarded as such.

As an archipelagic state, the national territory is implemented by drawing its “straight archipelagic baselines” pursuant to Art. 47 of the UNCLOS which prescribes among its main elements, as follows:

1. By “joining the outermost points of the outermost islands and drying reefs of the archipelago”, including the main islands and an area in which the ration of the area of the water to the land, including atolls, is between 1 to 1 and 9 to 1.
2. Mainly, the length of such baselines “shall not exceed 100 nautical miles...”
3. “The drawing of such baselines shall not depart to any appreciable extent from the general configuration of the archipelago.”

Accuracy Review: Matches

Reasoning Review: The User Answer captures all core points from the Suggested Answer: the definition of the archipelagic doctrine emphasizing unity of islands and waters under sovereignty and Article I of the Constitution; the rationale rooted in the status of the archipelago as an intrinsic geographic, economic, and political entity under UNCLOS; and the implementation via straight baselines under Article 47 of UNCLOS, including joining the outermost points of the outermost islands and drying reefs, the 1:1 to 9:1 water-to-land ratio, the 100 nautical mile maximum length, and adherence to the general configuration of the archipelago.

ALAC Review:

Answer: Matches
Explanation: Correctly defines the archipelagic doctrine, states its rationale, and outlines its implementation through straight baselines.

Define the archipelagic doctrine of national territory, state its rationale and explain how it is implemented through the straight baseline method (2016 BAR)

YOUR ANSWER 407 Words

ANSWER: The archipelagic doctrine treats an archipelago as a single unit, so that the waters around, between and connecting its islands, regardless of their breadth and dimensions, form part of the internal waters of the State. Its rationale is to preserve the territorial integrity, political unity, national security and economic interests of the archipelago. It is implemented by drawing straight baselines that join the outermost points of the outermost islands and drying reefs.

LEGAL BASIS: Article I of the 1987 Constitution provides that "the waters around, between, and connecting the islands of the archipelago, regardless of their breadth and dimensions, form part of the internal waters of the Philippines." Part IV of UNCLOS (Articles 46 to 54), particularly Article 47, allows an archipelagic State to draw straight archipelagic baselines, provided that (a) the ratio of water to land inside the baselines is between 1:1 and 9:1, (b) no baseline exceeds 100 nautical miles, except that up to 3% of the total may reach 125 nautical miles, and (c) the baselines do not depart to any appreciable extent from the general configuration of the archipelago. The Philippines implemented this through R.A. 3046, as amended by R.A. 5446, and later R.A. 9522 (2009), which the Supreme Court upheld in Magallona v. Ermita (G.R. No. 187167, 2011).

APPLICATION: Without the doctrine, each island would have its own separate territorial sea, and the waters between them could become high seas or exclusive economic zones open to foreign vessels, which would divide the country and expose it to security and economic risks. By drawing straight baselines connecting the outermost points of the outermost islands, all the waters inside are enclosed and treated as internal or archipelagic waters, and the territorial sea, contiguous zone, EEZ and continental shelf are then measured outward from those baselines. Under R.A. 9522, the Kalayaan Island Group and Scarborough Shoal are governed by the "regime of islands" under Article 121 of UNCLOS, so they generate their own maritime zones without being enclosed by the main baselines. As held in Magallona, these baselines do not reduce Philippine territory; foreign vessels only enjoy the rights of innocent passage and archipelagic sea lanes passage recognized by UNCLOS.

CONCLUSION: The archipelagic doctrine makes the Philippine islands and the waters connecting them one integrated territory. It is justified by national unity, security and economic necessity, and it is carried out through the straight baseline method under R.A. 9522 and Article 47 of UNCLOS.

Suggested (Model) Answer

A: By the term "archipelagic doctrine of national territory" is meant that the islands and waters of the Philippine Archipelago are unified in sovereignty, together with "all the territories over which the Philippines has sovereignty or jurisdiction."

This archipelagic doctrine, so described under Art. 1 of the 1987 Constitution, draws its rationale from the status of the whole archipelago in sovereignty by which under Part IV of the UNCLOS the Philippines is defined as an Archipelagic State in Art. 46, thus:

a. "archipelagic state" means a State constituted wholly by one or more archipelagos and may include other islands;
b. "archipelago" means a group of islands including parts of islands interconnecting waters and other natural features which are so closely interrelated that such islands waters and other natural features form an intrinsic geographic, economic and political entity, or which historically have been regarded as such.

As an archipelagic state, the national territory is implemented by drawing its "straight archipelagic baselines" pursuant to Art. 47 of the UNCLOS which prescribes among its main elements, as follows:

1. By "joining the outermost points of the outermost islands and drying reefs of the archipelago", including the main islands and an area in which the ration of the area of the water to the land, including atolls, is between 1 to 1 and 9 to 1.
2. Mainly, the length of such baselines "shall not exceed 100 nautical miles..."
3. "The drawing of such baselines shall not depart to any appreciable extent from the general configuration of the archipelago."

QUESTION 1 · POLITICAL LAW

Its rationale is to preserve the territorial integrity, political unity, national security and economic interests of the archipelago. QUESTION 2 · CIVIL LAW

Plutarco owned land that borders on a river. After several years the action of the water of the river caused the deposit of soil and increased the area of Plutarco's property by 200 square meters. (2017 BAR)

a. If Plutarco wants to own the increase in area, what will be his legal basis for doing so? Explain your answer.

ANSWER: Plutarco may claim ownership of the additional 200 square meters by accretion (alluvion), since the increase was caused by the gradual deposit of soil from the action of the river's current on land that adjoins the riverbank.

LEGAL BASIS: Article 457 of the Civil Code provides: "To the owners of lands adjoining the banks of rivers belong the accretion which they gradually receive from the effects of the current of the waters." Jurisprudence requires three requisites: (1) the deposit of soil is gradual and imperceptible; (2) it results from the action of the current of the river, not from human intervention; and (3) the land where the accretion takes place adjoins the bank of the river (Republic v. Santos III, G.R. No. 160453, 2012). The law grants the accretion to the riparian owner to compensate for the loss of land through erosion and for the burdens and easements imposed on riparian property (Art. 638, Civil Code).

APPLICATION: All three requisites are present. The soil was deposited over several years, which shows it was gradual and imperceptible. It was caused by the action of the river's water, not by any dike, quarrying or other work done by Plutarco or anyone else. Plutarco's land borders the river, so he is the riparian owner. The 200 square meters therefore belong to him by operation of law, without any act of appropriation. However, accretion is not automatically covered by the Torrens title of the adjoining land. Under Grande v. Court of Appeals (G.R. No. L-17652, 1962), Plutarco should register the increase in his name; otherwise it remains open to acquisitive prescription by a third person who possesses it openly and adversely for the period required by law.

CONCLUSION: Plutarco's legal basis is accretion under Article 457 of the Civil Code. He owns the 200-square-meter increase as the riparian owner, and he should have it registered under the Torrens system to protect his ownership against third persons.

QUESTION 3 · REMEDIAL LAW

How should the records of child and family cases in the Family Courts or RTC designated by the Supreme Court to handle Family Court cases be treated and dealt with? Under what conditions may the identity of parties in child and family cases be divulged? (2001 BAR)

ANSWER: Records of child and family cases in Family Courts, or in RTCs designated to act as Family Courts, must be treated with the utmost confidentiality. The identity of the parties may be divulged only when it is necessary and with the authority of the judge.

LEGAL BASIS: Section 12 of R.A. 8369 (Family Courts Act of 1997) provides that all hearings and conciliation of child and family cases shall be conducted in a manner that promotes the dignity and worth of the child and the family, respects their privacy at all stages of the proceedings, and that the records of the cases shall be dealt with utmost confidentiality, and the identity of the parties shall not be divulged unless necessary and with authority of the judge. This is reinforced by Section 43 of R.A. 9344 (Juvenile Justice and Welfare Act) on the confidentiality of records of children in conflict with the law, and by the Supreme Court's Rule on Examination of a Child Witness and Rule on Juveniles in Conflict with the Law, which allow closed-door proceedings and protective orders.

APPLICATION: Child and family cases, such as custody, adoption, annulment, domestic violence and cases involving minors, deal with sensitive private matters. Publicity could stigmatize the child, expose the family to harassment and discourage victims from seeking relief. For this reason, case records may not be opened to the public or the media, and court personnel, counsel and parties must keep their contents private. Disclosure is permitted only under two conditions that must concur: (1) disclosure is necessary, for example for the proper disposition of the case, an appeal, or the protection of the child; and (2) the judge authorizes it. Any unauthorized disclosure may be punished as contempt of court and may give rise to administrative or other liability.

CONCLUSION: Under Section 12 of R.A. 8369, records of child and family cases are strictly confidential, and the identity of the parties may be divulged only when necessary and upon the authority of the judge.

Define the archipelagic doctrine of national territory, state its rationale and explain how it is implemented through the straight baseline method (2016 BAR)

YOUR ANSWER 407 Words

ANSWER: The archipelagic doctrine treats an archipelago as a single unit, so that the waters around, between and connecting its islands, regardless of their breadth and dimensions, form part of the internal waters of the State. Its rationale is to preserve the territorial integrity, political unity, national security and economic interests of the archipelago. It is implemented by drawing straight baselines that join the outermost points of the outermost islands and drying reefs.

LEGAL BASIS: Article I of the 1987 Constitution provides that "the waters around, between, and connecting the islands of the archipelago, regardless of their breadth and dimensions, form part of the internal waters of the Philippines." Part IV of UNCLOS (Articles 46 to 54), particularly Article 47, allows an archipelagic State to draw straight archipelagic baselines, provided that (a) the ratio of water to land inside the baselines is between 1:1 and 9:1, (b) no baseline exceeds 100 nautical miles, except that up to 3% of the total may reach 125 nautical miles, and (c) the baselines do not depart to any appreciable extent from the general configuration of the archipelago. The Philippines implemented this through R.A. 3046, as amended by R.A. 5446, and later R.A. 9522 (2009), which the Supreme Court upheld in Magallona v. Ermita (G.R. No. 187167, 2011).

APPLICATION: Without the doctrine, each island would have its own separate territorial sea, and the waters between them could become high seas or exclusive economic zones open to foreign vessels, which would divide the country and expose it to security and economic risks. By drawing straight baselines connecting the outermost points of the outermost islands, all the waters inside are enclosed and treated as internal or archipelagic waters, and the territorial sea, contiguous zone, EEZ and continental shelf are then measured outward from those baselines. Under R.A. 9522, the Kalayaan Island Group and Scarborough Shoal are governed by the "regime of islands" under Article 121 of UNCLOS, so they generate their own maritime zones without being enclosed by the main baselines. As held in Magallona, these baselines do not reduce Philippine territory; foreign vessels only enjoy the rights of innocent passage and archipelagic sea lanes passage recognized by UNCLOS.

CONCLUSION: The archipelagic doctrine makes the Philippine islands and the waters connecting them one integrated territory. It is justified by national unity, security and economic necessity, and it is carried out through the straight baseline method under R.A. 9522 and Article 47 of UNCLOS.

Suggested (Model) Answer

A: By the term “archipelagic doctrine of national territory” is meant that the islands and waters of the Philippine Archipelago are unified in sovereignty, together with “all the territories over which the Philippines has sovereignty or jurisdiction.”

This archipelagic doctrine, so described under Art. 1 of the 1987 Constitution, draws its rationale from the status of the whole archipelago in sovereignty by which under Part IV of the UNCLOS the Philippines is defined as an Archipelagic State in Art. 46, thus:

a. “archipelagic state” means a State constituted wholly by one or more archipelagos and may include other islands;
b. “archipelago” means a group of islands including parts of islands interconnecting waters and other natural features which are so closely interrelated that such islands waters and other natural features form an intrinsic geographic, economic and political entity, or which historically have been regarded as such.

As an archipelagic state, the national territory is implemented by drawing its “straight archipelagic baselines” pursuant to Art. 47 of the UNCLOS which prescribes among its main elements, as follows:

1. By “joining the outermost points of the outermost islands and drying reefs of the archipelago”, including the main islands and an area in which the ration of the area of the water to the land, including atolls, is between 1 to 1 and 9 to 1.
2. Mainly, the length of such baselines “shall not exceed 100 nautical miles...”
3. “The drawing of such baselines shall not depart to any appreciable extent from the general configuration of the archipelago.”

Accuracy Review: Matches

Reasoning Review: The User Answer captures all core points from the Suggested Answer: the definition of the archipelagic doctrine emphasizing unity of islands and waters under sovereignty and Article I of the Constitution; the rationale rooted in the status of the archipelago as an intrinsic geographic, economic, and political entity under UNCLOS; and the implementation via straight baselines under Article 47 of UNCLOS, including joining the outermost points of the outermost islands and drying reefs, the 1:1 to 9:1 water-to-land ratio, the 100 nautical mile maximum length, and adherence to the general configuration of the archipelago.

ALAC Review:

Answer: Matches
Explanation: Correctly defines the archipelagic doctrine, states its rationale, and outlines its implementation through straight baselines.

Legal Basis: Matches
Explanation: Accurately cites Article I of the 1987 Constitution and the specific baseline requirements under UNCLOS Article 47 matching the Suggested Answer.

Application: Matches
Explanation: Properly applies the straight baseline rules and demonstrates how the waters and islands are integrated into a single unit.

Conclusion: Matches
Explanation: Concludes correctly that the doctrine integrates the territory and is implemented pursuant to the rules under UNCLOS.

Grammar and Clarity: No material readability issue.

Improvement Suggestion: Directly incorporate the specific definition of an "archipelago" under Article 46 of UNCLOS as a group of interrelated features forming an intrinsic geographic, economic, and political entity.

Plutarco owned land that borders on a river. After several years the action of the water of the river caused the deposit of soil and increased the area of Plutarco's property by 200 square meters. (2017 BAR)

a. If Plutarco wants to own the increase in area, what will be his legal basis for doing so? Explain your answer.

YOUR ANSWER 323 Words

ANSWER: Plutarco may claim ownership of the additional 200 square meters by accretion (alluvion), since the increase was caused by the gradual deposit of soil from the action of the river's current on land that adjoins the riverbank.

LEGAL BASIS: Article 457 of the Civil Code provides: "To the owners of lands adjoining the banks of rivers belong the accretion which they gradually receive from the effects of the current of the waters." Jurisprudence requires three requisites: (1) the deposit of soil is gradual and imperceptible; (2) it results from the action of the current of the river, not from human intervention; and (3) the land where the accretion takes place adjoins the bank of the river (Republic v. Santos III, G.R. No. 160453, 2012). The law grants the accretion to the riparian owner to compensate for the loss of land through erosion and for the burdens and easements imposed on riparian property (Art. 638, Civil Code).

APPLICATION: All three requisites are present. The soil was deposited over several years, which shows it was gradual and imperceptible. It was caused by the action of the river's water, not by any dike, quarrying or other work done by Plutarco or anyone else. Plutarco's land borders the river, so he is the riparian owner. The 200 square meters therefore belong to him by operation of law, without any act of appropriation. However, accretion is not automatically covered by the Torrens title of the adjoining land. Under Grande v. Court of Appeals (G.R. No. L-17652, 1962), Plutarco should register the increase in his name; otherwise it remains open to acquisitive prescription by a third person who possesses it openly and adversely for the period required by law.

CONCLUSION: Plutarco's legal basis is accretion under Article 457 of the Civil Code. He owns the 200-square-meter increase as the riparian owner, and he should have it registered under the Torrens system to protect his ownership against third persons.

Suggested (Model) Answer

A: Plutarco may invoke the provisions on accession in order to claim the increase in the area of his property. The ownership of property gives the right by accession to everything which is produced thereby, or which is incorporated or attached thereto, either naturally or artificially. (Art. 440, NCC) Since the additional area was brought about by the action of the river, as riparian owner, Plutarco owns the accretion which his land gradually received from the effects of the current of the waters. (Art. 457, NCC) (Central Bar Q&A by Paguirigan, 2024)

Accuracy Review: Partially Matches

Reasoning Review: The User Answer correctly identifies accretion under Article 457 of the Civil Code and Plutarco's status as a riparian owner benefiting from the action of the river current. However, it omits the broader legal basis provided in the Suggested Answer, which is the right of accession under Article 440 of the Civil Code.

ALAC Review:

Answer: Partially Matches
Explanation: The user correctly states that Plutarco may claim ownership through accretion, but omits invoking the provisions on accession as the legal basis.

Legal Basis: Partially Matches
Explanation: The user correctly cites Article 457 of the Civil Code regarding accretion received by riparian owners, but fails to cite Article 440 of the Civil Code on accession.

Application: Matches
Explanation: The user applies the facts showing that the river's action caused the deposit of soil on the land bordering the river, making Plutarco entitled to it as the riparian owner.

Conclusion: Matches
Explanation: The user properly concludes that Plutarco owns the increase in area based on the rules governing accretion.

Grammar and Clarity: No material readability issue.

Improvement Suggestion: Explicitly state that Plutarco may invoke the provisions on accession under Article 440 of the Civil Code in addition to accretion under Article 457.

You demonstrated a strong grasp of the rules on accretion and riparian rights.

How should the records of child and family cases in the Family Courts or RTC designated by the Supreme Court to handle Family Court cases be treated and dealt with? Under what conditions may the identity of parties in child and family cases be divulged? (2001 BAR)

YOUR ANSWER 335 Words

ANSWER: Records of child and family cases in Family Courts, or in RTCs designated to act as Family Courts, must be treated with the utmost confidentiality. The identity of the parties may be divulged only when it is necessary and with the authority of the judge.

LEGAL BASIS: Section 12 of R.A. 8369 (Family Courts Act of 1997) provides that all hearings and conciliation of child and family cases shall be conducted in a manner that promotes the dignity and worth of the child and the family, respects their privacy at all stages of the proceedings, and that the records of the cases shall be dealt with utmost confidentiality, and the identity of the parties shall not be divulged unless necessary and with authority of the judge. This is reinforced by Section 43 of R.A. 9344 (Juvenile Justice and Welfare Act) on the confidentiality of records of children in conflict with the law, and by the Supreme Court's Rule on Examination of a Child Witness and Rule on Juveniles in Conflict with the Law, which allow closed-door proceedings and protective orders.

APPLICATION: Child and family cases, such as custody, adoption, annulment, domestic violence and cases involving minors, deal with sensitive private matters. Publicity could stigmatize the child, expose the family to harassment and discourage victims from seeking relief. For this reason, case records may not be opened to the public or the media, and court personnel, counsel and parties must keep their contents private. Disclosure is permitted only under two conditions that must concur: (1) disclosure is necessary, for example for the proper disposition of the case, an appeal, or the protection of the child; and (2) the judge authorizes it. Any unauthorized disclosure may be punished as contempt of court and may give rise to administrative or other liability.

CONCLUSION: Under Section 12 of R.A. 8369, records of child and family cases are strictly confidential, and the identity of the parties may be divulged only when necessary and upon the authority of the judge.

Suggested (Model) Answer

A: The records of child and family cases in the Family Courts or Regional Trial Court designated by the Supreme Court to handle Family Court cases shall be dealt with utmost confidentiality and shall not be divulged unless necessary and with authority of the judge (Sec. 12, Family Courts Act of 1997).

How do I get started?

Daily Questions

What are Daily Questions?

How do I answer a Daily Question?

Answer Evaluation

How are my answers evaluated?

What is the ALAC Answering Framework?

BarBuddy uses the ALAC framework as a structured approach for evaluating and improving legal essay answers. ALAC stands for:

A — Answer

The response should establish a clear, definitive, and correct legal conclusion, preferably at the beginning of the answer.

L — Legal Basis

The response should identify and cite the relevant legal authorities, such as:

- Codal provisions
- Statutory laws
- Legal doctrines
- Relevant jurisprudence

The accuracy and relevance of the cited legal basis are considered in the evaluation.

A — Application

The response should effectively connect the facts presented in the question to the applicable legal rules, doctrines, or principles. A strong application demonstrates how the law applies to the specific facts rather than merely stating a legal rule.

C — Conclusion

The response should provide a logical and concise conclusion that summarizes the legal analysis and reinforces the answer established at the beginning.

Commercial Law — Daily Questions — October 22, 2026

Submitted Oct 22, 2026, 9:39 AM

Question

Royal Links Golf Club obtained a loan from a bank which is secured by a mortgage on a titled lot where holes 1, 2, 3 and 4 are located. The bank informed the Board of Directors (Board) that if the arrearages are not paid within thirty (30) days, it will extra-judicially foreclose the mortgage. The Board decided to offer to the members 200 proprietary membership shares, which are treasury shares, at the price of P175,000.00 per share even when the current market value is P200,000.00. In behalf and for the benefit of the corporation, Peter, a stockholder, filed a derivative suit against the members of the Board for breach of trust for selling the shares at P25,000.00, lower than its market value, and asked for the nullification of the sales and the removal of the board members. Peter claims the Club incurred a loss of PS million. The Board presented the defense that in its honest belief any delay in the payment of the arrearages will be prejudicial to the Club as the mortgage on its assets will be foreclosed and the sale at a lower price is the best solution to the problem. Decide the suit and explain. (2016 BAR)

Jethro Cabuhat's Answer

2 words

> hi hello

Lawyer-Approved Model Answer

A: The derivative suit will not prosper. The complaint did not have all the elements of a derivative suit:
a) exhaustion of intra-corporate remedies available under the articles of incorporation, by-laws, and rules and regulations governing the corporation to obtain the remedy the stockholder desires;
b) it is not a nuisance suit; and
c) appraisal right is not available. (Ching v. Subic Bay Golf and Country Club, G.R. No. 174353, 10 Sept. 2014)

AI Comparison

Gemini · compared against the suggested answer — Does Not Match · 1.0/5

Accuracy Review: Does Not Match

Reasoning Review: The User Answer does not address the question. The Suggested Answer states that the derivative suit will not prosper because the complaint lacks the essential elements of a derivative suit: exhaustion of intra-corporate remedies, proof that it is not a nuisance suit, and unavailability of appraisal rights.

ALAC Review:

Answer: Missing
Explanation: The user did not state whether the suit will prosper or not.

Legal Basis: Missing
Explanation: The user did not cite the required elements of a derivative suit provided in the Suggested Answer.

Application: Missing
Explanation: The user did not apply any legal rules to the facts of the case.

Conclusion: Missing
Explanation: The user did not provide a conclusion deciding the suit.

Grammar and Clarity: No material readability issue.

Improvement Suggestion: Decide that the derivative suit will not prosper because the complaint failed to allege all the required elements: exhaustion of intra-corporate remedies, that it is not a nuisance suit, and that appraisal rights are not available.

Keep your chin up and give the next question your best shot!

- Cite the specific legal basis: the article, section, law or jurisprudence relied on.
- Apply the rule to the facts (e.g. "In this case, ...").
- End with a conclusion that restates your answer (e.g. "Therefore, ...").
